MORE NEWSPRINT LIKELY

The prospect that more newsprint will be available to the newspapers of the United States after June is seen in a statement by Harold J. Boeschstein, director of the forest products bureau of the War Production Board, covering his report to a closed meeting of the Newspaper Industry Advisory Committee.

This is the first public expression of hope of an improvement in the newsprint situation since restrictions were imposed more than a year ago. The statement is regarded as an indication, in any case, that newspapers will not suffer further curtailments in the second quarter, starting April 1. A surplus of more than 30,000 tons appears in sight for the first quarter of this year, when production figures are weighed against consumption, Mr. Boeschstein said. He continued:

"We cannot guarantee now that the military paper and paperboard requirements will not be increased during the latter part of 1944, nor can we predict at this time what effect such increased demands might have on the future supply and use of paper."

Newspaper publishers have resorted to many ingenious devices to stay within curtailed newsprint allotments. They have included curtailment of advertising space, adoption of smaller heads and type and a narrowing of columns in several instances. Every plan put into effect has had as its main object the continuance of complete news coverage.

Newspapers have performed an admirable service in publicizing the various war campaigns despite the severe handicaps that have been imposed by paper restrictions and labor shortage. If increased paper tonnage is made available, newspapers will be better able to perform their part in the great job of reconstruction that lies ahead. Newspaper advertising volume in the immediate postwar era, it is widely predicted, will surpass any of the marks set in the past.

A DEBT TO BE PAID

Chungking announces its intention to demand compensation from Japan for all war damage to China since the Japanese occupied Mukden, Manchuria, almost 13 years ago. If ever a nation was entitled to compensation for unprovoked aggression and pillage at the hands of a savage neighbor it is China. But demanding compensation and getting it on the barrelhead are two different things. When the Allies, including China, get through with Japan, there will be little left for immediate compensation of the Chinese. Paying their debt to China would keep the Japanese broke for a century, at least. That, in the interest of world peace, is a commination devoutly to be wished.

Allied leaders who are reported to be distressed over increasing talk of postwar policies, declaring this is no time to change the subject, fail to make clear whether they think the subject is the war or the fourth term.

what it feels like to be bombed time after time and to hear the large shells whistling overhead while the men seek shelter in the fox holes.

Christmas of 1942, Snyder writes, was spent aboard ship in the vicinity of the Panama Canal, and about a week later the ship on which he sailed crossed the Equator. Two weeks later the vessel landed at Samoa, Pago Pago Harbor. After spending several months there, the outfit with which Snyder is connected sailed for Noumea Harbor at New Caledonia.

Later the outfit left for the Russell Islands and it was there Snyder got a glimpse of the Japs shelling the islands. Before the vessel landed on the Russells, a Jap dive bomber tried to sink it, but the aim was poor and the bomb landed about ten yards from the vessel. Snyder and his outfit, which spent about a month on the Russells, were subjected to bombing attacks quite frequently.

In the meanwhile the campaign on New Guinea was started, and Snyder's unit, a supply outfit, was transferred to New Guinea. According to Snyder, the Japs did much of their bombing by night. He also gave a description of the dog fights, in which more than 200 planes took part and tried to shoot each other out of the sky. He commented also upon the accuracy of the United States pilots.

Because of the frequent bombings, the Marines were not permitted to have lights at night. After having spent some time on New Guinea, Snyder's outfit was given a rest period for several weeks, and then left for Bougainville. The vessel landed at Empress Augusta Bay.

"As our vessels approached the shore," writes Snyder, "we began shelling the Japs, and they returned the fire. Our vessels were given protection by our bomber and fighter planes. Jap dive bombers tried in vain to hit our vessels."

"As soon as we made a landing, we began digging in, and it was in the fox holes that we got protection. During our second night on Bougainville the Japs made another attack, and we lay in our fox holes without any protective cover. One of the bombs dropped about ten feet from my fox hole, and the concussion almost blew us out of our positions. Stranpell was flying in every direction.

"The next day we cut down trees and placed them over our fox holes to provide protection. Sand bags were also placed on top and at the sides of the fox holes.

"Shelling is one thing to be feared, because the only warning is the whistle of the shells as they fly over us. The explosions of the shells cause great concussions. I would rather go through a bombing than to be shelled because if a shell lands near, the concussion may result in serious injury or death. I have been in two shellings, both of which lasted about 30 minutes."

HULMEVILLE

A party conducted on Saturday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Winder, Middletown Township, marked the ninth birthday anniversary of their daughter Doris. The small guests who gathered included Edith Martindell, Joan and Joseph LaPenta, Lorna Kaczmarek, Phyllis Bleasling, Doris Maret, Morton Sutton, Lois Baxter, "Nickie" Grudza, "Billy" and Farnum Stimmers, "Betty Lou" Goll and Phyllis Winder. The girls and boys enjoyed a program of games with prizes being awarded. Ice cream and cake were served, and Doris was presented with a number of gifts.

Miss Anna Mae Blackshire, of Philadelphia, passed the week-end as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Blackshire.

The week-end was enjoyed by Mrs. William Freund at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Konrad, Trenton, N. J.

Sgt. Lewis Bispham Missing in Action

Sgt. Bispham, who is 23 years of age, is single. The telegram from the U. S. War Department to the Bispham family is to the effect that the soldier is missing as of the 21st of February.

He trained at numerous army air bases in this country, in the states of Mississippi, Florida, California, Oregon, Washington, etc. He has participated, his mother states, in at least eight missions over enemy territory.

Set Bispham, who was employed by a Trenton belt manufacturing firm before entering the army, has a brother, Wayne Bispham, S. 1/c, in the U. S. Navy, his base being San Francisco, Cal.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

back at least a year in preparation for war. At that time every informed and clear-thinking man knew that soon or late we were sure to be involved. Certainly, Mr. Roosevelt knew that. Certainly, the chiefs of staff of our army and navy knew it. Yet we went through that campaign with the candidates insisting that we would not get into the war; that American boys would not be sent to fight on foreign soil. And we made none but superficial pretense toward preparedness.

AND ALL the while our participation was inevitable. Pearl Harbor merely hastened an entrance that had been certain since the fall of France. It was the third-term campaign that kept the truth from the people and caused the waste of priceless months during which the country could have made important progress toward preparing itself for the conflict. It is impossible to compute accurately the cost in time and lives of this delay. Nor is it possible now to reckon the cost of the fourth-term campaign. As a candidate for re-election, Mr. Roosevelt is certain to be handicapped both as Commander in Chief and as President. He will assume a non-political attitude and hold to the pose of not giving any thought to politics. But only an angel could do that. It is beyond the power of a human being and Mr. Roosevelt is very human, indeed. As a candidate for the Presidency, politics will inevitably be in the front of his mind, as it would be in that of any other man in his position.

THIS MEANS that every decision he makes during the period of his candidacy will be made with its political effect in mind. That isn't discreditable; it is just the inescapable consequence of his situation.

He is not now in position to deal realistically with a great many pretty vital questions. For example, there is the question of a national service act, urged as essential by the Army, the Navy and the Maritime Commission. It is not possible to pass such an act except through the wholehearted support of the President. But the President is not able to give that kind of support because, for one thing, the leaders of organized labor are violently opposed, and without organized labor's support he cannot be elected. It is the same way with the extremely vital tax program. Mr. Roosevelt urges more taxes than Congress has levied, but the necessity of being elected makes it impossible for him to abate his opposition to the general sales tax. Yet, except by a general sales tax, there is no way to raise the additional revenue he demands.

NOR is there any other way to reach the huge surplus funds in the hands of the large lower income group, which, concededly, constitute the great inflation menace. Two things combine to keep the President from retreating from his position against the sales tax. One is the opposition of the labor bosses; the other his own insistence that it is a tax upon the poor. If he were not a candidate he could sweep both those things aside and take a firm stand in the national interests. There are many more in the same class. For one, there is the fight against the "Little Steel" formula, which, if successful, will knock the props from under his whole anti-inflation program. For another, there is the soldiers' vote bill, into the struggle over which his candidacy has injected so much political heat that the facts are badly blurred. So it goes all the way through. Politics will tinge the White House thinking and acting from now on more than before—and there is abundant evidence of the tinge in the past. It would not only be a deep personal humiliation to Mr. Roosevelt not to be re-elected a fourth time but, doubtless, he sincerely believes it would be a great misfortune for the country and for the world. As to that, there are, of course, two views.

Eternal Father, as we come unto Thee this day it is with a sense of our own insufficiency, and our own inability to cope with the problems of life. Yet, we come, knowing that Thou wilt help us. We thank Thee for the testimony of those who have preceded us, and for the testimony of our own experience, which reveals the ever present power of a loving Heavenly Father, Who is able to do all things, and Who will do that which is best for His own. Place within our hearts and lives a strong and abiding faith, O God, that we might live victoriously. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

GRAND THEATRE

Praised as one of the most entertaining comedy-dramas of the season, Universal's "Top Man"

comes today to the Grand Theatre. Co-starred in the picture are Donald O'Connor, Susanna Foster, Lillian Gish, Richard Dix, and Peggy Ryan. Outstanding players in the supporting cast include Anne Gwynne and Noah Beery, Jr. while diverting musical specialties are contributed by the Barbra Minevitch Rascals, the Bobby Brooks Quartette, and Count Basie and his orchestra.

The story of "Top Man," declared to be intimately appealing, deals humorously and dramatically with present day family affairs and situations close to the heart of so many Americans who have readjusted their lives to meet necessary wartime changes.

INAUGURATING A NEW SERVICE FOR WAR WORKERS

To help overcome the acute shortage of alarm clocks in the Bristol area we will open Bristol's first

ALARM CLOCK EXCHANGE

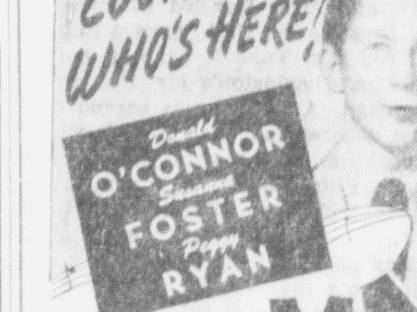

Here's the way the exchange will operate:

- 1 Bring in all your old, broken alarm clocks which are not in service.
- 2 We'll pay you cash for every alarm clock you bring in . . . from 35c up (depending on the condition of the clock).
- 3 We'll salvage and repair as many of these extra alarm clocks of yours as is humanly possible.
- 4 Then, if you're a war worker, we'll sell you these reconditioned and repaired clocks to you.
- 5 Remember . . . this exchange is just starting. We do not have any alarm clocks yet. The success of the Exchange will depend on how quickly, and how many, of these old alarm clocks you bring in to us.

CONSERVATIONISTS MEET TO CONSIDER LAND MANAGEMENT

State and Federal Conservation Agencies Convene At Harrisburg

GOVERNOR AT SESSION Plan to Form a Long-Term Program of Managing Wildlife Lands

HARRISBURG, Mar. 8.—Pennsylvania chafes at another conservation "first." For the first time in the nation's history representatives of State and Federal Conservation agencies and civic groups were invited to pool their combined knowledge in an effort to help develop a comprehensive long-term land management program for wild-life purposes. They met for this purpose last afternoon in Harrisburg with the Pennsylvania Game Commission, which is now responsible for managing over one million acres of land for wildlife.

Significant of the tremendous importance of the conference was the fact that Governor Edward Martin, an ardent conservationist, was present to welcome the various participants and to impress upon them the importance of pooling their knowledge in order to lay the foundation of a long-term program of managing wildlife lands, both from the economic and recreational viewpoints.

President Ross L. Leffler who issued the invitations for the conference, in his introductory address struck the keynote of the meeting when he informed those present of the numerous factors in the way of intelligent food and cover plantings, essential lumbering operations to guarantee continued successive timber growth both for lumber and wildlife, erosion control, and other related activities so vital to a well balanced management program for the future.

Other prominent speakers, each contributing the benefit of long experience in dealing with various phases of the subject, included Dr. Clarence Cottam of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Washington; Dr. Hardy L. Shirley, Director, Allegheny National Forest Experiment Station, Philadelphia; Dr. Fred Lininger, Director of the Agricultural Experiment Station at State College; Hon. Miles Horst, Secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Harrisburg; and Dr. F. A. Pitkin, Executive Director of the State Planning Board.

Following the regular conference a general open discussion ensued, which was avidly entered into by all present. Organizations taking part in the conference included representatives of State and Federal Conservation Agencies, Research and Educational Institutions, Public Organizations, including the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, Pennsylvania Park Association, Pennsylvania Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs, Pennsylvania Women's Clubs, Garden Clubs, and the Pennsylvania Nut Growers Association, together with interested individuals, members of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, its staff and representatives of the Press.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

CROYDON, Mar. 8.—On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Howard Charleston, of Strathmere, N. J., gave a dinner at the Can Take It Club in honor of Mrs. Charleston's birthday anniversary. A dinner was served and the decorations were in red, white and blue. Mrs. Charleston received many gifts. Guests were from Croydon, Eddington, Philadelphia and Camden, N. J. Mr. and Mrs. Charleston and Robert Sottung expect to return to Strathmere, N. J., the latter part of this month after spending five months in Philadelphia.

Two Paroles Granted At Court Session

sons of George Dutton; and Edward Dooley, 18, all of Newtown. Others implicated—minors—will be before the Court shortly for sentence.

"Don't you know there is a gasoline shortage and that gasoline is needed on the other side and by our war workers?" Judge Boyer asked. "Which side are you on in this war? Are you with the United States or with the enemy?"

The defendants assured Judge Boyer they were "on the side of the United States."

One of the boys works in a Bristol defense plant and makes good money, and another of the boys is employed on a farm and earns fair pay.

As to Howard Dutton, the Court continued probation pending arrangements for medical treatment.

Edward Dooley was committed to the Pennsylvania Industrial School at White Hill, Pa., for an indefinite term.

Vincent Dutton, who can return to his job in Bristol, was placed on probation for a period of one year, the Court remarking that he had faith in the boy to make good.

"Newtown wants this boy-gang broken up and Newtown is going to watch you," Judge Boyer warned

Vincent. "We are going to be tough on this group of boys. Three of them are going to be sent away, and you can warn any others who take part in this kind of thing that they can expect the limit," Judge Boyer added.

Judge Boyer yesterday refused a divorce in the case of Stella Gracey, of Tuckaway Farm, Haycock Township, against 1st Lt. Joseph Robert Gracey, of Pine Camp, N. Y., for want of sufficient proof of jurisdiction. Mrs. Gracey asked for a divorce on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment. They were married September 30, 1934, at Ardsley-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.

The master in the case, J. Hibbs Buckman, Langhorne attorney, commented in the final papers: "The master does not like either the play or the scenery in this case."

In the master's opinion, "an odor of collusion prevailed, as well as an attempt to use the law of Pennsylvania for the granting of a divorce without establishing a bona-fide residence with domiciliary intent within the State of Pennsylvania."

Aircraft Workers In East Are 40% Women

though the female employees cannot work amicably in pairs.

Despite the fact that women work better and more efficiently when teamed with men, the aircraft officials say they are temperamentally easier to handle than male mechanics, technicians and machinists.

The element of personal ambition and the desire for job preference is said to be almost totally lacking in the women working on plane production.

There also is less turnover when women are employed. Less than one per cent of West Coast women workers have quit their jobs according to figures of Boeing, Lockheed, Consolidated, Vultee, North American and Ryan aircraft plants.

Almost 100 per cent of the industrial recruits had never held such jobs previously. Accustoming the women to skilled and unskilled labor requires a longer training period than that required by men, but once taught, the girls really produce.

Rosie the riveter and Jane the plane maker have helped to step up production of aircraft in more ways than one. An automatic feed, self-adjusting, twin-head multiple riveter which was developed for use by lady riveters, saves exactly 25-man hours in the completion of a job. Other industrial tool improvements have been made as a result of the widespread employment of women in machine shops and factories.

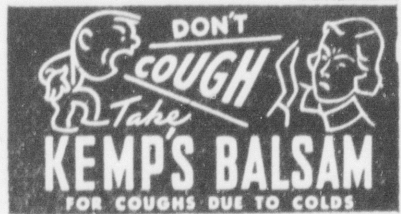

Women, disconcerted by shop noise, present a problem in their aspirin consumption, but they require less first aid than men. Officials suggest this is due to their great respect for the lethal potentialities of machines.

The arduous work which women are now doing has not resulted in nervous or physical exhaustion, officials say. As proof, Boeing personnel officers cite the case of Othelia Lambert, a sheet metal worker in the Boeing Wichita, Kans., plant.

Miss Lambert puts in two hours daily working in a Wichita restaurant to ease the help shortage during the lunch hour and then reports for the second shift at Boeing. Her five brothers are in the service and Miss Lambert has a personal interest in the war.

The absenteeism rate is higher among women, but the Aircraft

Council attributes this to the high percentage of women workers who have children to care for and homes to look after.

Only three per cent of all women employed in aircraft work have been dismissed according to figures supplied to the Council. All but a fraction of one per cent were dismissed because of irregular attendance.

Some 20,000 replacements in West Coast aircraft plants will be necessitated by the fathers draft and the absorption of 18 year old boys into the services. This is expected to result in even more women being hired.

One small San Diego feeder plant is 87 per cent staffed by women already. This is a tremendous increase over the Spring of 1941 when only a fraction of one per cent of the personnel of aircraft factories were women and these sewed covers and held minor jobs.

Here's one reason why our fliers get back

PHILADELPHIA produces 10% of all

U. S. war materials. Heavy industry in this area has stepped up output about 193% since 1939, some industries as much as ten and fifteen times more than formerly. All this means enormous increases in the use of electricity. Advance planning, carried on regularly by your electric company for years before Pearl Harbor, plus a loyal devotion to duty on the part of our employees, explains why we are able to meet today's demand for electricity without interfering with the service you desire. All this with nearly 20% of our regular workers in the armed forces and a critical shortage of materials which makes replacements difficult.

Cited for Heroism

John H. Kistler was highly skilled at evaluating new installations in his work with Philadelphia Electric's Property Records Division. Today, an Ensign with Uncle Sam's Navy, he is just as skilled at racing through enemy fire to rescue American fliers who have been shot down into the sea. John serves on an aircraft rescue boat which his shipmates like to call "Pinto," and for some months was on active service in the Munda Rendora area of the Southwest Pacific. The skipper and crew have been cited for courageous work. Ensign Kistler's citation reads "extraordinary heroism, professional ability, and distinguished service above the call of duty. His cool courage and sound judgment were a great factor in the successful accomplishment of many of the rescues effected and his personal valor and heroic conduct were in keeping with the best traditions of the U. S. Naval Service." John's boat is believed to have set a record for rescues of this sort, having brought more than 35 fliers to safety.
